Mrs. Betty Lyler Wilson
(of Nashville, Tenn.)

Famous For Her Cakes Recommends

Mrs. Wilson of Nashville, Tenn., is famed the world over for her wonderfully delicious cakes. They are shipped to all parts of the Globe for special affairs where the best of Cakes are demanded.

This year, as in former years, Mrs. Wilson enjoys the distinction of making the President's Christmas Cake, using Calumet Baking Powder.

Mrs. Wilson's Baking Motto is: "To have complete success with no failures, care should be used in selection of Baking Powder."

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

Some little time ago I made a careful study and investigation of the baking powder subject and I feel fully repaid. I am firmly convinced from the results I have received that there is no baking powder to equal Calumet for wholesomeness and economy, and I also recommend Calumet Baking Powder for its never failing results.

December 9, 1913. Mrs. Betty Lyler Wilson.

Calumet also received the Highest Awards at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago and Paris, France, 1912.

Buy a can of Calumet Baking Powder at once, and use it in your Holiday Baking, making your Christmas Cakes as good as the President's.

Good Advice

Make a good start with the New Year by trading with us.

A "White Christmas" after all.

Old Santa did bring us water for our lake.

There were never as many Christmas trees before.

And the best gift of all was water. His gift to the people of Lancaster.

LOST: Gold handle Umbrella, with initial "S. B. R." M. L. Caner.

Railroad traffic was unusually heavy through Lancaster during the holidays, even "Old Henry" carried a load every day.

We have heard of no empty stockings in Lancaster. And if Old Santa failed to visit anyone it was an oversight.

Judge "Punkin seed" Prather dons the ermine in the City Court Jan. 1st. We know his reign will be an impartial and a wise one.

The merriest Christmas ever known in Lancaster, peace and happiness seemed to go hand in hand with prosperity in Lancaster.

The Record is in the throes of "moving day", and we now know how to sympathize with the weary housewife upon such occasions.

The Doll Contest, which has just closed at R. S. Brown's Store was won by little Miss Anna Bell Turner, she winning the first prize.

It seems a certainty that Luther Herron will continue as Chief of Police under the new City administration. We never had a better one.

County and city have new officers with the new year. The Record bids God speed to the out going and Good luck to the incoming administration.

Election Notice.

A meeting of the stock holders of the Garrard Bank & Trust Co. will be held in the stock holders room at the bank Tuesday afternoon January 13, 1914 at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. J. W. Elmore, Cashier.

Water Turned On Again.

The rain and snow of the past week has placed about seven feet of water in "Lake Placid", and Chief Herron has turned the water on, he announces for good, and for all purposes. The prospects are now for an ample sufficiency of water, and with judicious use of it in future the lake should supply all requirements.

Hard On The Kiddies.

The holidays during the year 1914 will fall on the following days: January 1st, Thursday, Washington's birthday, Feb. 22d, Sunday, Decoration day, May 30th, Saturday, Independence day, July 4th, Saturday, Labor day, always the first Monday in September, Thanksgiving day, Thursday, of course and Christmas day on Friday.

Busy At Postoffice.

From all over the country comes reports of unusually heavy business at the postoffices, and Lancaster was no exception to the rule, as can be testified to by everyone who visited the local office, and this means everybody. However, postmaster West and his force handled the rush rapidly and there was no room for complaint. For every day during the season the rural carriers were veritable traveling Santa Claus'.

Gets Too Gay In Opera House.

Hernando Burnside, colored, took on too much Christmas last Thursday night and created a disturbance in the gallery at the Opera House. He was ejected and placed in jail to ponder over night upon his actions, and the following day before Judge Harris, confessed and paid a fine of $10, and costs. "Huck" as this boy is known is an unusually quiet colored boy, and his lapse of propriety is due to an over indulgence in his Christmas celebration.

Prof. Evans Is Grateful.

Prof. B. F. Evans resumed his school at Scotts Fork, Stone, and not Three Forks of Sugar Creek, as has been heretofore stated in the Record, on last Monday morning.

Prof. Evans asks the Record to express his sincere appreciation, and gratitude to the people of Lancaster for the many kindnesses shown him since his recent accident and during his confinement to his room.

Sale Called Off.

Having changed my plans, my sale advertised for Saturday, Jan 3rd is called off indefinitely.

Proud And Happy Little Miss.

Little Miss Loretta Elsener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Elsener of Charleston W. Va., and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. Miller of this place, won the doll offered by Mrs. Hattie Ward as a prize to the young lady receiving the most hallots with goods purchased at her store previous to the holidays. The doll was almost as large as the lucky little girl and to say that she was supremely happy in the possession of it, does not half express it.

Tax Supervisors Appointed.

Messrs J. P. Bourne, F. B. Marksbury, R. K. Swope, T. R. Slavin and Davis Sutton have been appointed Tax Supervisors for the county and will begin their sittings on next Monday, January 5th and will continue in session for 11 days.

Messrs Frazier G. Hurt, A. H. Bastin and John Walter Sr. have been appointed Supervisors for the city and began their sittings on Tuesday of this week and will continue from day to day until their labors are completed.

Anderson.

Mr. William Hiatt Anderson died at his home in Harper Kansas and his remains were laid to rest at that place. He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Julia Lytle of Stanford, a sister of Mr. Robert S. Lytle, who is well known in Lancaster, and by two sons and two daughters, all of whom are grown and married. He is also survived by two brothers, Messrs Robert Anderson of Missouri and Allen Thurman Anderson of this place and by six sisters, Mrs. Bettie Miller of Lexington Ky, Mrs. Mary Harris and Nellie Vorhees of Indianapolis Ind., Mrs. Cyrus Daley of Garrard county, and Mrs. Dollie Brown and Miss Amanda Anderson of Lancaster.

The deceased was born in Lancaster in 1839, and was the oldest son of the late Alexander and Susan Anderson and was connected with some of the leading families of the county. He was at one time engaged in business in Lancaster, together with his brother, Mr. A. T. Anderson and the late Mr. Alexander Dunn. He was an upright, honorable and highly respected citizen. About twenty five years ago he went to Kansas, locating at Harper, where he has since engaged in the hardware and implement business.

The news of his illness came last week to his relatives here, and was quickly followed by the announcement of his death.

Great sympathy is expressed for the family in their bereavement.

Will T. Burdett Dies Suddenly At Junction City.

Mr. William T. Burdett was found dead in his bed at Junction on Christmas eve morning, Dec. 24th. Mr. Burdett had been complaining of a cold, but otherwise was in his usual health. His death was due to heart disease. The funeral services were held at Parksville at 11 o'clock on Christmas day after which the remains were placed at rest in the cemetery at Parksville. He is survived by one brother Mr. George D. Burdett, vice-president of the Central Life Insurance Co., and one sister, Miss Mollie Burdett, both of whom reside in Louisville.

The deceased was about 47 years of age and was the youngest son of the Rev. James Burdett, a minister of the Christian church. He was born in Somerset, but his young manhood was spent in Lancaster, where he is well and favorably remembered. "Peaches" Burdett, as he was familiarly known was one of the most popular young men who ever resided here. Gifted with a brilliant mind and a sunny disposition, he made friends of all with whom he came in contact, and that memory is faithfully cherished in the hearts of many Lancaster people to this day, and many is the silent tear that will be shed at the knowledge of his demise.

Will Burdett some years ago left Lancaster going to Chicago, where he held a position of responsibility in the office of the City Auditor, but declining health forced him to seek a milder climate, and he located in Junction City, where at the time of his death he was book-keeper for a lumber firm.

TO THE PEOPLE OF GARRARD COUNTY.

With the closing day of this year ends the responsibility assumed eight years ago, when with the usual oath of office we took up the duties of County Attorney of your County. Whether in that long period of official service we have accomplished for the progress and betterment of the County what was promised and expected you alone must judge. Be your opinion as it may, we can give up the commission of authority incidental to the office with the satisfaction that we have, at least, done our best. Changed conditions in the County have come during this time. Places where once the criminal appetite was fed and where was fostered and encouraged a disregard for law have disappeared. General peace and good fellowship prevails throughout the entire County. Those old offenders who once revelled in crime and were a constant menace to the peace and quiet in the communities of the County have either been brought to decent and tolerable conduct or congenial communities in other parts of this or other States. We congratulate the good citizens of Garrard County in its present condition of good order. The modest part we have had in it all makes us deeply grateful that you have been so generous as to give us an opportunity to render some public service.

In deciding not to ask for further public favor in this connection, we voluntarily retired with the hope that the people would name as our successor our friend and former business associate, Mr. G. C. Walker, and we now rejoice in his good fortune and trust that his success in performing the duties of this important office may meet the best wishes of his host of friends. The many expressions of confidence in the good purposes that have controlled us in the performance of our duties, during all this time with suggestions of regret upon our retirement, from friends without regard to political affiliation is gratifying indeed. The opportunity came to us through the democratic organization in the nomination and renomination to the office. We recognize our deep obligation to the party and hope to be useful to the organization and helpful to its nominees in the future. Now, with the highest hope for the future progress and greatness of our County and with heart full of appreciation for the help and honor given me by our generous people of this County, I am gratefully yours, J. E. Robinson.

ONE YEAR IN THE HARNESS.

It has now been one year since we became editor of the Record. It being our first undertaking in journalism with timid faith in the outcome, we entered the field with some misgivings. But with an efficient and able office force and assistants the years success has far exceeded our fondest hopes, for this has been the Record's most successful year in its long life. Not financial success, for we have expended in new equipment and what we think preparation for future work, all and more that might have been profit, but success in that we have near twice the number of readers than one year ago, success in that we have given to our readers a journal for the year with clean and reliable news, and we hope such editorial comments as causes our readers and patrons to welcome the Record to their homes for their own enlightenment and as a helper for the family. The public will be gratified to know that the entire present office force will remain with us next year. We will be in our new home in the Central Record Building on Richmond street by the time the next issue is published. With the changes and additions to the rooms and with our new equipment makes it all easier for us and our force, and the location of our business most accessible and convenient to our friends and patrons.

The many complimentary expressions and words of satisfaction from our readers stimulates us to better and larger undertakings for the years work we are now entering. Of course, we have no further ambition than the Record be a good local journal, the best that can be made. But with a circulation almost doubled, and with a good prospect for it to continue to increase, makes our news paper community much larger, and enables us to bring many more people in touch with each other and with our city. We shall continue to actively encourage the development of the business interest of our county and city. Our best thought shall be used for the cause of education, and our educational department will get in closer touch with the schools and the educational bodies of the county, during the year.

We hope to so interest the young men and women growing up in the community, your sons and daughters, in the future opportunities for success at home, that will stimulate a sentiment in them to stay and develop the resources of our own country, rather than seek and try for fortune in distant states. It is the desire of the editor that the readers of the Record feel that its purpose is to bring progress and betterment to them and their communities, and we seek your interest and help in our effort in this undertaking. It is our sincere desire to so continue in the work that your affection for and confidence in your home paper will grow and justify a continuation of your assistance, encouragement and patronage.

 RICHMOND, KY., Dec 23rd, 1913.

To The Tobacco Growers of Garrard and adjoining Counties:

We have sold over our floors thus far over one million pounds of the new crop burley tobacco, and while we have not reached the extreme top prices for separate baskets, we have had a better general average than we had last year. We have every reason to believe that our prices will be uniform throughout the entire season.

The following are some of the best prices obtained.

W. T. Sebastin, average $17.00, Forest Calico, avg 17.75, D. N. Long, avg 17.75 Coy & Curtis, avg 18.00, Coy & Prewitt, avg 18.00, Elsmid & Curtis, avg 20.25, Jerry Noland, avg $18.75.

We have never made statements to mislead any one, make no claims but those founded upon facts, and we wish again to repeat.

1st.—That we give every seller an absolutely square deal whether he sells thousands of pounds or hundreds.

2nd.—We are financially responsible.

3rd.—We can and do secure just as much for your tobacco as any house in the world for same grades of tobacco.

4th.—We have plenty room for you and for your teams.

5th.—We have an up to date commodious Warehouse with every known facility to handle your tobacco.

6th.—Our two houses are connected by a viaduct, the old house used as a pricing plant, where several of the largest buyers prize all tobacco purchased in this market.

7th.—We have had four years experience in the loose leaf business, which is worth a great deal to you but costs you not a penny.

We urge you if you have never sold with us to ask your neighbor who has, if our treatment of them in the past four years warrants every claim we make, and to compare our prices with any other house in the country. If these claims are true simply get in line with the crowd and bring us your tobacco.

Thanking you for your confidence and your business. We are Very truly yours,

The Madison Tobacco Warehouse Company.

Astonishing Cures Seem Miraculous

Persons Who Were Helpless From Disease Rise Up Almost As If
 By A Miracle After Using Strange, New Liquid.

A message from Fort Wayne, Ind., says many persons in that city are now in a turmoil over many astonishing cures reported by persons who have used the strange new liquid, Root Juice, which has created so much enthusiasm in Atlanta and other southern cities.

Mrs. J. Schondell, who lives at 610 Madison St., Fort Wayne, claims to have suffered for years with rheumatism which became so bad that she was helpless. She had tried doctors and patent medicines without results and had about given up when the wonderful power of the famous Root Juice treatment became known.

The startling story of her recovery is best told in her own words, taken from a signed statement which she recently gave out. Regarding her case Mrs. Schondell says: "I was unable to move and had to be carried from one place to another. After trying doctors and medicines without success, I began using the Root Juice and can say that when I had taken two bottles I was able to walk without assistance and am now once more taking care of my household duties. The medicine saved my life."

Atlanta Still Excited.

Atlanta people continue to report many strange and wonderful benefits that are following the use of the new Root Juice medicine in that city.

Persons who suffered from indigestion, loss of appetite, pains, belching, bloating and distress after eating, constipation, biliousness, headaches and similar ailments due to functional disturbances of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, say that the first few doses bring relief. The appetite increases, strength returns and the general condition improves.

Mr. Andrew Barney, residing at 624 Decatur St., who has been a sufferer from stomach, liver and kidney trouble for over two years, in a statement issued for publication said: "I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, belching, headaches and pains in the small of my back. At times I had no appetite and at other times I could not sleep. I was nervous, irritable and worrysome and felt all run down. I used the new Root Juice medicine only two weeks but already feel a great deal better. My indigestion is nearly gone, I can eat almost anything and for the first time in two years I sleep fine. Before taking this Root Juice treatment I tried six different medicines and four doctors."

The new medicine can now be obtained at any good, well-stocked drug store and in view of the wonderful benefits being derived from its use would seem advisable for all home people who seek health to at least give it a thought.

Week By Week.
Each Week Appear the Statements of Lancaster Residents.

Last week it was a Lancaster citizen who spoke. The week before, it was a Lancaster citizen who spoke. The week before, and for many weeks before it was a Lancaster citizen who spoke. And again this week it is a Lancaster man. You are not asked to act upon the word of a stranger. The best guidance that is humanly possible to give you—the encouraging word of neighbors, is always given.

Will C. Davis, Danville Pike, Lancaster, Ky., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have done me more good than anything else and I can recommend them to everyone. My kidney action was irregular and I had backache. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved me."

"When Your Back is Lame—Remember the Name." Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Davis had—the remedy backed by some testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Rev. E. B. English, who has been the pastor of the Baptist church for the past year, tendered his resignation at the business meeting Saturday, Sunday morning he preached an eloquent sermon, the subject being "Heaven." On Sunday night he preached from the subject, "Labor Not for the Meat which Perisheth." The house was crowded at each service. After the services Sunday night the members took leave of their pastor with a farewell handshake and many eyes were dimmed with tears as the meeting came to a close. A year of unselfish service with the saints at this place had endeared Rev. English to the hearts of everyone with whom he came in contact. The respect and love was mutual, and both the pastor and the church had labored together in perfect harmony. There had been a fruitful harvest under his able leadership, the cause of Christ had been advanced, and Zion was triumphing over the powers of Satan.

Some two months ago Rev. English received a call from Stanford church which he considered in connection with Preachersville church as his pastorate for the next year. Some time later he received a call to Berea church and intended to still continue as pastor here in the event he accepted their call, thus filling the pulpit here one Sunday a month. But the State Mission Board which is supplementing for the Berea church, demanded full time of Rev. English for the Berea church. After prayerful deliberation Rev. English decided to resign his pastorate here and accept the Berea pastorate where he will have a much larger field for his labors. It is with much regret the church gives him up at this place but wish him Godspeed in the latter field.

Mi-o-na.

When you feel irritable, tired and despondent—when you have nervous twitches, specks before the eyes, headaches, sour stomach, heartburn, indigestion and pains in the colon and bowels—you suffer from indigestion, which soon develops into dyspepsia—the chief cause of nerve exhaustion—you need Mi-o-na at once.

Mi-o-na is not a cure-all, but a scientific remedy that surely ends stomach misery. It builds up and strengthens the stomach walls and glands, improves quickly the digestive system. Then the vital force and nerve energy is restored, imparting strength and good spirits to the discouraged, and down and weak.

Do not suffer another day. Get a fifty cent box of Mi-o-na Tablets at R. E. McRoberts & Son.

"PEG O' MY HEART." AT BEN ALI.

A notable attraction is promised for Lexington and vicinity at the Ben Ali, Jan. 1, 2 and 3rd, matinee Jan. 1st and 3rd.

In "Peg O' My Heart" the comedy of youth by J. Hartley Manners which has captivated a continent and enthralled New York, the dramatic centre of this country, for over a year, playing to capacity business at the Court Theatre, New York.

"Peg O' My Heart" was written for those who like a sweet, tender comedy, full of laughter and tears, with a natural heroine in it. There is a consistent element of freshness in her nature that keeps the audience surprised and interested, and in Miss Florence Martin, Oliver Morosco picked a charming young actress to enact this slip of an Irish lassie.

Peg O'Connell is the daughter of an Irish-American, who sent her to England to visit her uncle. The uncle dies while she is on the way, and leaves a will that is a guide post to her future. The dead man leaves one thousand pounds a year, to be paid to Mrs. Chichester, Peg's haughty and aristocratic aunt, provided she will see to Peg's upbringing. Because her bank has just failed she consents to this clause in the will and receives Peg into the midst of her family.

But it is from the moment that Peg, with a frayed bag under one arm and a more frayed mongrel under the other arm, enters the scene that the real play begins. She has a lovely brogue, a lot of common sense, and an uncommon amount of quaint Irish wit. Peg has a troublesome time of it from the moment of her entrance, for she has been a natural unfettered soul, and is made to live up to all sorts of social rules about which she knows nothing.

Incidentally Peg keeps the daughter of the house from eloping with a married man, while she herself runs away with the heart of Jerry, who, as it turns out in the third act, is a baronet, her guardian, and bank director, besides being a jolly good fellow.

Oliver Morosco has supplied a fitting production to J. Hartley Manners' fascinating and sparkling comedy, and the cast is a notable one including Isabel Vernon, Colin Campbell, Maude Allan, David Proctor, May Horan, Pell Trenton, Reginald Carringtons Earle Craddock, etc.

A Washington Correspondent Has The Following To Say Of A Book That Will Be Of Interest To Every Lancastrian.

Senator Bradley has progressed so far with the book of anecdotes and character sketches he is preparing that he is looking about for a publisher. It will be a big book and full of interest, of Kentucky politicians of both parties, and to those who are interested in the manners and customs of the State shortly after the Civil War.

Several of the stories deal with antebellum times, too, being those related by the Senator's father and some of his older friends.

In the book, in authentic form, will be found the yarns that have made the Senator famous as a story-teller. "How Gen. Buckner Lost a Vote," "Why the Indians Ran Away," "Parading John K. Hendrick" and the rest. But a majority of the stories deal with characters other than the Senator himself—Judge T. Z. Morrow, Spencer G. Dabney, Kentucky's first commercial traveler; Brother Prather, Dennis Haley, Bill Thorne, Senator James and many others famous in the politics of the State. There are court-room stories, political meeting stories, country church yarns and quaint character sketches. One or two of the chapters are profound, particularly the story of Rufus Eno., the reclusive cobbler of New Haven, as related by Col. W. H. Slaughter. Many are pathetic, but in the main the narratives are humorous, and all are goodhumored.

The Bullet That Killed a Man

By MARGARET ELDRIDGE

When the war between the king and the parliament came on I was thinking of marrying the eldest son of a marquis, Lord Tinterton.

A headstrong boy of my acquaintance, Ralph Chester, not more than nineteen years old, took it into his silly head to fall in love with me. The worst of it was that his father was a strong adherent of the parliament, and this fired the sympathies of the son. Ralph had joined a troop of the psalm singing Roundheads and was preparing to go with them to a rendezvous where the parliamentary forces were being collected. The evening before he left he came to see me to say goodby, I suppose, for we had been neighbors and our now being on different sides did not affect our friendship. What was my astonishment when he told me that he loved me.

I shall never forget the boyish look on his face as he spoke the words, seeming to feel that he was presumptuous in addressing one he considered so superior to himself. A woman I was secretly pleased, and I confessed that I was secretly pleased. I made my refusal as easy to bear as possible, but my young lover took it hard.

The war had been fought out in England, and Cromwell went to Scotland to suppress the movement against him there. One day a trooper returning from the war stopped at the gate and, dismounting, tramped into the ground and, knocking at the portal, handed in a letter for me. I opened it and, glancing at the bottom, saw the signature of Ralph Chester. The letter was accompanied by a little box. Ralph wrote that he was dying. A surgeon had extracted a bullet from his wound and had pronounced the poor boy that he would send it to me. It was in the box.

I did not at first realize the effect this gruesome gift would have on me. It was some time before I opened the box and did so at last from a strange desire that came over me to see the bullet that had killed a man and that man my lover. It was like any other bullet, but not so to me. It seemed to be talking to me, telling me a myriad of things, all about the young man who had loved me, but whom I had not loved. I replaced it in the box, resolving that I would put it away and never see it again.

It was not long before a desire came to me to take it out and look at it. I resisted the desire. I endeavored to interest myself in other subjects. Lord Tinterton, who had been fighting under Prince Rupert, returned and renewed his suit. To help me get rid of the effect of my dead lover's gift I tried to listen to him. But my heart was not with Tinterton, and I put him off. I yielded to my desire to see the bullet and, opening the box, took it out. It seemed to reproach me, and for my life I could not consider it what it was—nothing but an inanimate lump of lead.

My mind every day came under the strange influence of this inanimate object. It was a constant reproach to me that I had turned away a love. What right had I to reject that which was so sacred? Before the memento came I had considered marrying Tinterton, though I was indifferent to him personally, to be the most natural thing in the world to do. He had fine estates and by skillful diplomacy had saved them from being confiscated by the protector. My future position as a marchioness would be all that could be desired. And yet I was deterred from giving him an affirmative answer by this little lump of lead. Or was it not rather what that lump of lead represented? It did not seem so to me, though I do not doubt that it was.

At last I determined to try to break the spell by accepting Tinterton. The evening after doing so, when I went to my room, I tried to keep away from the drawer of my dresser, where I kept the bullet. I stood looking at the drawer, using all my will power to avoid going to it. All to no purpose. I was drawn like a resisting animal by a rope to the dresser, opened the drawer and took out the bullet. It lay there in its box, inanimate, yet it was to me a reproach. I held it in my hands till the tears came into my eyes. Then I put it back in its place and began to wonder how I should recall all I had said to Tinterton.

I am growing old. King Charles II. has reigned and been succeeded by his brother James. I am a spinster and shall always remain a spinster. Tinterton never forgave me for accepting him and then rejecting him. For I had no excuse whatever to offer him. Tell him that I had been forbidden to marry him by a bit of lead. Impossible. I broke with him without giving him a reason and have since been considered by him a weakling. He has long been married to another.

I have often wondered wherein lay the power of the bullet that killed my lover. Was it merely an expression of my feelings? Was it endowed with a subtle power that came from the man it killed? Upon this I still wonder. But whether the spell it exercised in itself, in me or the man whose life it terminated, it is remorseless. Rather, it was remorseless, for it changed the course of my life at that period when I would not for it, have married and lost my identity in that of my husband and children.

IN THE HORSE BARN.

The average mule will do as much work at two years old as the horse will at three or four. Keep the feet level and keep the shoes on the outside rim of the foot.

Do not let the horses cool off too suddenly after hard work or driving.

Dust lard plaster on doors to keep the odors down. Fumes of ammonia from reeking piles of manure will injure a horse's eyes.

Breed your mares to only the best stallions. We have enough common colts.

Never leave home at this time of year without a blanket for your horse and a topcoat for yourself.

FEEDING BEEF CATTLE.

A Good Margin of Profit in Fattening Home Raised Calves.

There are several reasons why beef cattle are scarce, but one of the foremost is that farmers are selling their veal calves at the age of six weeks, writes W. G. Noland in the Orange Judd Farmer. They do not consider how much loss is incurred by doing so. These calves can be placed on pasture, and before the owner realizes it they are old and large enough to be put on dry feed and be fattened for market. This is one reason for the scarcity of feeding cattle and high priced beef, but most of the farmers who sell calves at such a tender age do it because they don't care to do it know how to feed a steer for market.

A calf that is born, reared and fattened on the same farm is the one that pays. Not only is it a better feeder, but it is generally a quiet and hearty animal. Not every farmer, of course, is prepared to feed cattle, but if he wishes he can be without a great deal of expense. Not every farmer, on the other hand, knows how to feed and fatten cattle, but this can be learned by beginning with a small number and gaining experience little by little.

I have found that it is poor economy to underfeed, however expensive feeding material may be. If a herd of cattle is on the farm to be fattened the corn must not be milled solid nor contents spared. When I am feeding cattle I use whatever feeds I have that will be eaten to advantage and with a relish. I use bran, crushed corn, corn stover, hay, cottonseed meal, and give free access to rock salt. I have warm sleeping quarters and a good stack of straw in the lot where the animals are kept. It is a loss to any cattle feeder to try to make a profit on a herd of cattle without having hogs to follow them. Much corn is thrown from the feeding troughs by the indifferent steer, and this scattered grain, including the droppings, makes a fattening ration for a number of good sized sows.

Those who can get cattle and feed to feed should not question the advisability of feeding the corn rather than selling it at an unsatisfactory price. The price for good beef is likely to hold.

To make this short feed the steers ought to range in weight from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds when purchased. Then as heavy cattle are always in demand by packers they should make a large net profit.

CAUSES OF SWEENEY.

Treatment For Wasting of Shoulder Muscles of Horses.

The common cause of sweeny, or wasting of the muscles of the shoulder, is sprain of the parts, brought about when a young colt is plowing or pulling hard in any way, says Dr. A. S. Alexander in the Farm and Fireside. It is most commonly caused when the colt is placed in the furrow, as then it is constantly slipping in and out of the furrow. It is best to place a colt on the land side when learning to plow.

In many instances so called sweeny is wasting of the muscles of the shoulder, due to some chronic foot disease which causes lameness. Navicular disease or chronic corns or ringbone commonly lead to wasting of the muscles of the shoulder. It is therefore necessary in every case to decide what is the true cause. If it is from foot lameness the muscles will grow in again if the lameness is cured.

In ordinary sweeny without lameness the animal should be kept at work, and three times a day the wasted parts should be thoroughly rubbed and the skin pulled away from the flesh. At first a strong liniment may be rubbed in. If lameness is present stop working the horse and rub with liniment twice daily. In addition massage the wasted parts or have the parts blistered with cerate of cantharides after removal of the hair. The blister may have to be repeated several times at intervals of two or three weeks.

Care of Brood Sows.

The brood sows should be handled so one can go up to them at any time. A good time to have them farrow is about April 1. A good place is a stall in the horse or cow barn. The time of farrowing can be determined quite exactly. The milk comes into the teats four to six hours before farrowing. Don't feed the sow for twenty-four hours after farrowing, but give her slightly warmed water. Then feed something like oats and some shorts. When the little pigs are five or six weeks old begin feeding them some grain feed like ground oats.

DRIED BEET PULP AS A DAIRY FEED

The feeding of a small herd of dairy cows without a silo from a limited amount of rumout (illage land presents quite a problem—that is, if a profit is made, writes a New Hampshire farmer in the Rural New Yorker. While there is now no question about the value and economy of silage as a feed it is nevertheless a fact that thousands of farmers are still without a silo. The best substitute we have found for silage is dried beet pulp, which we commenced feeding soon after it was put on the market.

Previous to using the pulp we fed the grains commonly considered best for dairy cows—viz. cornmeal, bran, cottonseed meal, gluten feed, hominy, etc.—in various combinations, depending on the cost of each and kind of roughage available. But we had more or less trouble from garget, caked udder, cows off feed, and milk much generally shrank in milk much sooner than we thought they should. The beet pulp did not perhaps cause the cows to give a greatly increased flow of milk, but there were much less variation and shrinkage, and the troubles above mentioned disappeared. We have fed

The miserable specimen of a cow here pictured is typical of the many useless animals maintained in this country. Instead of being a source of profit such animals do not pay for their keep and are justly designated "robber cows." Testing for milk production and butter fat is the best means of eliminating this unworthy type. The dairyman who keeps a herd of such scrubs is merely cumbering his fields and working for nothing.

the pulp both wet and dry and can see no particular difference in results. If fed dry cows should have access to water at least twice daily.

The rule we follow quite closely, but with some variation for amount of grain per cow, is one pound of grain for each three pounds of milk. The maximum grain feed is continued until milk flow is very small, when we reduce to from four to six pounds per cow and give that amount until within one week of her time to freshen. Each cow's grain is weighed, and we are exact about this to the ounce. By experimenting we found that to commence reducing the cow's grain ration as her milk flow diminished would cause her to shrink more rapidly, whereas if same amount was continued right along she would be encouraged to keep up as near as possible to her full flow of milk. We of course watch the cows closely and, if any unfavorable symptoms appear, immediately reduce the ration, but this very rarely happens. By feeding in this way as the cow's milk flow diminishes she commences to put on more flesh, and the unborn calf also gets needed nourishment.

WORK THE STALLIONS.

Plentiful Exercise Conduces to Health and Vigor.

There is no stallion so good that he will not be a lot better if he is worked daily in the harness and made to take his turn in all the hard labor of the farm. What is there about a stallion that he should be condemned either to a life of idleness or to neglect more or less total? Few stallions kept for service in the country get proper care at all during the winter season. Generally they are maintained on a starvation diet and allowed to grow hair several inches long, in which all manner of dirt and vermin may collect at will. Stalls are seldom cleaned, and as for cleaning up the exercising yard, that is never thought of.

Why should so many stallions be kept in this obnoxious way? Take any one of the farm horses and submit it to the same treatment and it would go wrong in a short time. Why then expect a stallion to withstand such ill treatment simply because he is a stallion? No matter what the horse cost break him and put him to work. If he is a giant then and snows, if he is a drafter, will be a tower of strength in the gang plow and the manure spreader. He will haul logs out of the timber with ease. If properly handled he is the pleasantest worker imaginable because he is always unafraid and generally more intelligent than geldings or mares.

It is all in the man who handles the stallion. Then in addition to keeping the horse in a much more healthy condition continued labor in the harness will make and keep him docile and much more easily handled than if he is neglected and left to himself for bad habits, mental and physical. There is a big dividend in working an entire horse, no matter what he cost.

Warts on the Udder.

Warts on the udder of a cow are readily removed by rubbing in last castor oil or fresh goose grease once or twice daily. Any wart that has a small nail may be removed at once by the use of the scissors; then lightly apply liniment caustic pencil.

Lesson I.—First Quarter, For Jan. 4, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark ix, 30-37; x:13-16—Memory Verses, x:14-16. Golden Text, Mark x:14—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The first part of our lesson is found also in Matt. xviii, 1-6; Luke ix, 46-48; and is in each place, as here, preceded by the record of the transfiguration, the casting out of the demon from the boy and the prediction of His death and resurrection; then the account of their dispute by the way as to which of them should be the greatest in the kingdom. Matthew says that they came to Him with the question, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? But Jesus had perceived the thought of their heart before they asked Him (Matt. xviii, 1; Luke ix, 47).

The sequence of events is not often the same in the gospels, but where it is the same, as in the case of these four or five different items, there must be a connected line of teaching. Here it seems to be something like this—three of the disciples were privileged to see a foreshadowing of the kingdom on the mount. At the foot of the mount the other disciples were baffled by the devil, and the enemies of Christ were having the laugh on them. When Jesus came He cast out the demon and rebuked their unbelief and spoke of the necessity of prayer and fasting; then He spoke of His approaching sufferings and death and resurrection, of which Moses and Elijah had talked with Him on the mount (Luke ix, 31), but they understood not what He meant, for they had other thoughts.

They were not like little children who were helpless and dependent and believe what they are told. Had they not all wrought miracles, and had not three of them seen Moses and Elijah, and did they not know something of a kingdom foretold by the prophets, when all nations should be blessed by Israel. Had they not heard repeatedly that the kingdom was at hand, and, although He had not yet told them of a throne, a place of authority, for each of them (Matt. xix, 28; Luke xxii, 30), might they not reasonably expect, being such favored men as to be chosen by Him that they might be near to Him and constantly with Him, that they would be of some special importance in His kingdom?

One might be higher than another, and might not the recently favored three be excused for thinking that they would have a preference? Possibly they said to the others, If we had been there we could have cast out that demon. How great the contrast between Him, who was thinking of His approaching sufferings and death, and these ambitions men who carried their strife up to His last night with them (Luke xxi, 24), and had no ears for the story of suffering and rejection.

They were not like babes to whom things can be told, but more like the wise and prudent in their own estimation, who fancy that they know all things.

He would doubtless have told them more than He did but they had been able to bear it, but they were not humble, not teachable, not ready to receive Him as a Messiah about to be cut off and have nothing at present—cut off because of our transgressions (Dan ix, 26, margin; Isa. liii, 8).

What a specially blessed little child to be taken in His arms, but He will take you. He will take any one who will let him, any one who will come to Him, for "Him that cometh, He will in no wise cast out" (John vi, 35).

The second incident of our lesson has a different setting. This also is found in Matt. xix, 13-15; Luke xviii, 15-17. Placing the three accounts together we read that little children were brought to Him that He might touch them, put His hands on them and pray. It is just possible that this taking that other little child of the first part of our lesson up in His arms may have led other parents to desire that He would do for their children what He had done for that child, and therefore they brought them.

But these important men who were desirous to have prominent places in His kingdom would not have Him troubled with these little ones, evidently forgetting such words as these, "Your little ones which have no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in." "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou shalt be blessed." "The streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls."

The disciples rebuked those who brought the children, but Jesus rebuked the disciples and uttered those memorable words of our Golden Text, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." Then he took them up in His arms, put His hands upon them and blessed them, and if you cannot see Him smiling upon them as He did so you must be as much out of sympathy with Him as were these disciples.

The incident which follows in each of these gospels of the rich young ruler who went away sorrowful because his possessions were more to him than life eternal, sets forth the teaching concerning the little children. They were empty, dependent, humble, teachable, but the disciples were self-sufficient, ambitious, inclined to strife, and the rich ruler was full of his earthly goods and unconsciously breaking the first commandment.

A Case of Worldly Wisdom

By EFFIE D. GARDNER

When Miss Mabel Willmarth wrote her lover, Edward Auchinkloss, that under her parents' orders she must break with him he was very badly cut up. He did not blame Mabel; she was not much over seventeen years old—certainly not an age at which a girl is warranted in marrying—counter to the express wishes of her parents.

Auchinkloss was permitted to call upon Miss Willmarth to say goodby, after which he was expected to refrain from visits or communication. He found her as much averse to breaking with him as he was to breaking with her, but he also found her resolute in her determination to obey her mother.

"Father and mother," she said, "have only me. If I marry you in opposition to their commands a barrier will be raised between them and me that will never be removed. Besides, mother has convinced me that couples usually grow together, irrespective of any attachments for others—either husband or wife may have had before marriage. We must make the best of the present for the sake of the future. You will marry another girl and I will be nothing to you. I suppose I shall."

"Forget me?"

"I don't know. It doesn't seem to me now that I can."

"What you have said has, of course, come from your mother. It is too wise to be spoken by a girl of seventeen. But I confess that it is wise, or seems to be, and I would not for the world persuade you to do an unwise thing. One thing I wish you to tell me. Has not your mother some one in view for you who she thinks will be able to give you more than I?"

"Why do you ask that question?"

"Because until very recently both she and your father seemed to be well satisfied with me for a son-in-law."

"Mother especially enjoyed me to say nothing to you about any future relations between me and any one else. She says that, having broken with you, you are not supposed to take any further interest in me. Surely you cannot be expected to approve of any man that she—I mean—I might marry."

"Right again—that is, if your sentence had been finished as you began it. You should have finished 'that she might select.' Nevertheless it is evident that some one has been selected for you, and naturally I am especially anxious to know who the fellow is."

"The fellow?"

"Well, the gentleman."

"Your use of the word shows that mother is right. You would naturally be prejudiced against any man I might marry."

He tried for an hour to induce her to tell him the name of her new fiancé, but, having promised her mother that she would answer no questions with regard to her future, she stood firm. Finally he asked her if he should write a number of names on a bit of paper to tell him whether the name he wished to know was on the list. Since the man was a newcomer and she did not believe Auchinkloss had ever seen or heard of him, she consented. He wrote twenty names on the paper and handed it to her. She handed it back to him with a request to be released from her agreement. Auchinkloss released her and immediately took his departure.

Several weeks rolled around, and Miss Willmarth saw nothing of her discarded lover. She did not even meet him on the street. This was surprising, because the town in which they lived was small. More weeks passed with like result. His place was not supplied by the new suitor, because Mr. and Mrs. Willmarth had decided that he might not pay their daughter any attention whatever till she had passed her eighteenth birthday. Then the couple might be engaged, but for a year before marriage. Such an arrangement prevented any one from linking the two names together.

Four months passed between the time Auchinkloss was discarded and Mabel's eighteenth birthday. The latter had passed and the engagement had been made, though not announced, when the new appointee was arrested one day on a charge of giving a check on a bank where he had no account. Other claims against him followed the first, and it was not long before a pretty black record came to light. The engagement between him and Mabel was broken without any one outside the family knowing that it had occurred.

Then one day Auchinkloss appeared at the Willmarth home and was restored to favor.

"You remember," he asked, "our conversation when I was dismissed about a natural prejudice on my part as to the one who would take my place? Well, that prejudice served a purpose. It was I who unearthed your new lover."

"You? Why, you didn't know his name?"

"I did. His name was the only name on the paper I handed you that was not fictitious. I had heard of him several years before and had not heard any good of him. I went away and spent weeks tracing his record, and finally got those he had swindled on his track."

"You don't mean it?"

"But for me you might have married a swindler."

All of which goes to show that our worldly wisdom doesn't count for much.

Fortune Hunting Girls

By HELEN CONSTABLE

Marjorie Tait, a miss in short dresses, was sitting by a table studying her lessons when she heard her mother and a visitor, Mrs. Winston, talking in the next room.

"Malcolm writes me that he's coming down for a week this fall to visit me." "What can your nephew find to amuse him in such a quiet place as this? There are no young men, and as for girls, there are only a few in short dresses."

"That's what he's coming for—to get rid of the girls. They are worrying the life out of the poor fellow trying to marry him. You know, Malcolm has just come into a fortune of four or five hundred thousand dollars. He's handsome as a picture, was voted the most popular man in his class while in college and is highly intellectual."

Marjorie gasped at this catalogue of attractions.

"Dear me," exclaimed Mrs. Tait, "how I should worry about him if he were my son! The marrying age is the most dangerous of all to a man."

"By and by you'll have to worry about Marjorie."

"Not for years. Marjorie has scarcely put away her dolls. Tell Malcolm when he arrives to come and see us."

When Malcolm Wright came to town he called at Mrs. Tait's. Mrs. Tait was taking a siesta, and it required some time for her to awaken and get herself in proper costume to receive visitors. Marjorie, who examined the card as it was carried past her in the upper hall, ran down a back staircase, seated herself before her study table and began to repeat her lessons aloud:

"Amo, I love; amas, thou lovest; amat, he loves; amamus, we love; amatis, you love; amant, they love."

Mr. Wright, hearing the Latin verb "to love" conjugated by a soft feminine voice, arose from his chair and looked into the other room through the open door. He saw a very pretty, innocent looking schoolgirl sitting before her books, apparently unconscious of being observed. He listened to some more self drilling, then gave an "Ahem!"

Marjorie gave a start so well feigned that the young man did not doubt for a moment that it was caused by seeing him.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed.

"Well, now, I like that! I find you saying 'I love, you love, we love,' and on seeing me you exclaim, 'Oh, dear!' I presume if you had finished it would have been, 'Oh, dear Malcolm Wright!'"

"I assure you—I was studying. You were quiet. How long have you been in the drawing room?"

"Long enough to have sent my card to Mrs. Tait, your mother, and been waiting several minutes."

At this juncture Mrs. Tait was heard coming downstairs, and Mr. Wright, who had barely crossed the threshold, stepped back in time to avoid appearing to have left the room. The lady received him cordially, regretting that she had not sons or daughters of an age to help make his stay pleasant.

A day or two later Mr. Wright, up-proaching Mrs. Tait's house, saw her emerge from the house. Marjorie saw him from an upper window. He mounted the steps and rang. Marjorie opened the door.

"Good morning. Is your mother at home? No? How unlucky! Perhaps you will permit me to come in for a moment. I wish to leave a message for her."

A month passed. Mr. Wright remained away from the many girls who were trying to snare him. The route past Mrs. Tait's house was his favorite walk, and whenever he was sure Mrs. Tait was not at home he called and asked for her, and was taken in charge by Marjorie. One evening he called when he knew the mother was at home.

"Why, Mr. Wright, the good lady exclaimed, 'you here yet? What a dread you must have of the girls of your home to have kept away from them so long?'"

"It is about a girl of your home that I have called to speak to you."

"A girl of my home?"

"Yes, your daughter, Miss Marjorie. I wish your permission to pay my addresses to her, or, rather, your permission that we be engaged."

Mrs. Tait gazed at Mr. Wright. "I love her very dearly, and she loves—"

"What, that child?"

"She tells me she is nearly eighteen."

"But how, when, where?"

Marjorie came up behind her mother and put her arms about her.

"I heard all you and Malcolm's aunt said about those horrid girls who were trying to catch him for his fortune, and I thought it a pity that they should deceive so nice a man. He heard me conjugating the verb 'to love' when he called on you, and somehow it affected his brain, for—"

Mr. Wright took Marjorie away from her mother and, placing his own arm about her, the two pleaded their cause together.

"Oh, it's all right!" said the older lady. "Only I can't make out how you two managed to do the courting."

"I managed it, mamma. I did it for Malcolm. Just think of his being driven from his home by those horrid fortune hunting girls."

It Is Thinning Out or Fall of Dandruff Use Parisian Sage.

Most men are careless regarding the care of the hair—not until it comes out by the combfull do they really take notice. Then it may be too late. If your husband's hair is getting thin; if he has dandruff or the scalp itches and burns—take immediate action; do not let him become a baldhead. Get from R. E. When the hair stops falling and the new growth appears use every other night until the hair is thick and abundant.

Parisian Sage is a delightful and invigorating hair tonic for men, women and children. It is a scientific preparation based on a thorough knowledge of what is needed by the hair and scalp to keep them perfectly healthy and remove dandruff, stop scalp itch and falling hair. Johnny's Composition On Paper.

Paper is the stuff what school-books and news are printed on. When the news are not what you like, you say the paper lies. I think that's mean because the paper can't fight you back. School-books and letters and bags and kites are made out of paper. Kites don't last long, but they are more fun than books. After while books get wore out and then they are sent back to the mills and made into paper again and the paper is made into school-books and what chance has a feller got against such a endless chain?

That's all I want to know about paper.

Testimonial From High Authority.

Attention! Poultry Raisers.

One of my show birds had the worst case of roup I ever saw. She was almost dead before I noticed it. I purchased a bottle of Bourbon Poultry Cure and I took a feather, dipped it into the medicine and swabbed out her throat as far down as I could reach. I also put a liberal quantity in her soft feed and drinking water, and today she is well and sound and is laying nearly every day. It is certainly the most remarkable medicine I ever saw. I would not think of being without it and I hope to induce other poultrymen to keep it on hand constantly. HIGH PRICES. REALIZED AT BIG BURLEY HOUSE LEXINGTON.

Big Burley has had a very successful season up to the Christmas Holidays. It has had more than its proportionate part of the increase in the amount of tobacco that has been sold over the Lexington market. We have sold several crops that averaged around eighteen cents, but these were better than the average crops.

The average of all the tobacco sold on the Lexington market is $12.32. This average does not represent the price of an average crop, as a great many farmers have been selling their low grades and damaged tobacco, because these grades were especially high. A good average crop would sell for about $13.50. The last week before the Holidays, bright, color tobacco were $1.50 higher than they had been up to that time.

We believe now is a good time to sell all grades. We appreciate the business we have had in the past and are anxious to serve you in the future. Our house is open day and night to receive tobacco. Come to see us before you decide where to sell. We can offer you everything any other house can "and then some."

Baker.

As the Record goes to press the sad intelligence reaches us of the death of Mrs. Jennie Baker in Gallapoli O. Her remains will reach Paint Lick today (Thursday) and after funeral services at the home of E. L. Woods will be placed at rest in the cemetery at that place on Friday. Mrs. Baker was near 72 years of age and has been in feeble health for some time, and her death, while a shock to her many friends and relatives in Garrard county, was not wholly unexpected. Mrs. Baker was the mother of Messrs. Ernest and James Woods of Paint Lick. For many years she has made her home with her daughter Mrs. Joseph Frisbie in Gallapoli.

Mrs. Baker was held in the highest esteem in the Paint Lick neighborhood where she was noted for her many noble qualities, and the sincere sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in their loss.

"Everywoman"

The inspiring dramatic spectacle, "Everywoman", from the pen of the late Walter Browne, in many ways the most talked-about play of recent years, will be offered by Henry W. Savage at the Opera House for three days and two Matinees commencing Matinee New Years day.

This unique play which has been recorded such a tumultuous reception by the public is a sort of nondescript in the matter of classification. It partakes of the nature of drama, opera and musical comedy, and yet in reality is not confined to any one of the three classes. It was suggested to Walter Browne by the ancient morality play, "Everyman", which was performed throughout America a few years ago by a band of English players under the direction of Ben Greet. Yet that work was gloomy and morbid, while "Everywoman" is bright, witty and whimsical, and abounds in comedy.

The production is on vast scale and its preparation engaged the various departments of the Savage producing offices for nearly a year. It represents an each outlay of upward of sixty thousand dollars and is considered by Mr. Savage as his greatest triumph as a producer. The cast is a long one and includes thirty-seven speaking characters. The musical setting is one of the attractive features. An entire symphony orchestra is carried to properly interpret the score which was composed by George Whitefield Chadwick, dean of the New England Conservatory of Music, of Boston. There is both a grand opera and musical comedy chorus. The company includes Thalia Magrane, one of the most talented and beautiful leading women of the American stage, who appears in the title role. This is the second year Miss Magrane has played the role and her performance is one of the most striking achievements of the American stage.

THE IDEAL RATION FOR DAIRY COWS

It is not possible to give a ration that will suit all conditions and all kinds of cows. In general, however, it may be said that the first requisite of an ideal ration for a good dairy cow is to feed all the roughage (sorghum, hay, silage, roots, etc.) she will eat up clean and one pound of concentrates (bran, chop, all kinds of grain, soy bean meal, etc.) for each three to four pounds of milk she produces. In most cases it will be found that this will be just about all she will eat regularly without going off feed. The second requisite in an ideal ration

For milk production the Holstein cow is unequalled. Other breeds of dairy cattle give milk testing higher in butter fat, but for performance at the pail the Holstein stands pre-eminent. The photograph here reproduced shows a few of the cows of a herd of Holsteins maintained at Sayville, N. Y., by W. E. Slater. Recently twenty-four of this herd were shipped to the Arizona State hospital. Nothing but pure breeds are kept in the herd.

is that it should be nutritious. The ration should be sufficiently bulky on the one hand to fully distend the stomach and other digestive organs, and at the same time there should be enough digestible material to fully meet the requirements of the animal. Practical experience is reached when about two-thirds of the total dry matter of the ration is in the form of roughage and one-third in the form of concentrates.

In addition to this an ideal ration should be palatable so that an animal will eat it with relish. While little is known concerning the effect of palatability, it is certainly true that of two feeds alike in all other respects the one most readily eaten by the animal will be the more effective.

The secretion of milk seems to be intimately connected with the water content of the food. The cow needs a large amount of water to drink, but aside from this there is a demand for feeds containing a high percentage of water, such as green forage, silage, roots, etc. The cow's digestion is kept in much better tone when such feeds are used.

To have an exact balance between the protein and the carbohydrates and fat is not so important as was once thought; for milk production it is necessary to have a larger amount of protein than for beef animals, but a dairy ration is now considered fairly satisfactory if the nutritive ratio falls anywhere between 1:4 and 1:5.5.

Last of all the ideal ration should be composed of such feeds as will furnish the largest amount of digestible nutrients at the lowest cost. This necessitates the liberal use of home grown feeds with proper selection of those which must be purchased.—A. B. Nystrom, Washington Experiment Station.

The "Currency Bill" A Strictly Democratic Measure, And A Great Democratic Triumph, Becomes A Law.

Minute and definite information giving the newly enacted Currency Bill in detail are not now obtainable, in fact the banks throughout the country are yet waiting definite action in the premises until they are able to secure a copy of the measure as it passed and became a law.

We will endeavor however to give our readers the substance of the measure. It provides for the issuance of currency based upon notes and bills representing commercial transactions, backed by a gold reserve and guaranteed by the Government. The new currency so issued is expected to contract and expand as the state of trade and the exigencies of the times may demand.

Provides that the reserve funds of the various banks of the country shall be concentrated into what shall be known as "regional banks". These banks are to be capitalized by the various banks and shall be controlled by the board of directors elected by the various banks holding their stock.

It proposes to establish a market for the negotiable commercial paper which forms the bulk of the assets of all banks, in order that in time of stress or in case of necessity, this paper may be readily converted into cash, and that the conversion may be made without loss to the institutions owning the paper.

It proposes to establish a number, probably a dozen of great regional banks centrally located, throughout the country, these institutions to have the power to issue currency, re-discount paper and to judiciously mobilize and centralize the surplus funds of the various banks of the country.

Finally, the appointment of a Federal Reserve Board, consisting of seven members, appointed by the President, with final powers of control over the entire banking system.

The bill provides that the stockholders of the "regional banks" shall receive a dividend of 6 per cent and that a surplus fund of 40 per cent shall be established and the remainder of the earnings shall be divided, one half going to the Government as a franchise tax, the remainder to be used for the establishment of a "depositors insurance fund" to be used for the reimbursement of depositors in failing bank members.

The above clauses constitute the gist of this gigantic measure, minus the exact phraseology and the lesser details. So many amendments and changes were made while the bill was being buffeted backward and forward between House and Senate, that these will be unobtainable until the bill is printed in detail and distributed to the public. One important change, especially affecting country banks, was made by the Senate, that is, the House provided that only paper maturing in ninety days should be eligible for re-discount; realizing that rural banks handled a comparatively small amount of this short term paper, the Senate broadened this clause in order to embrace six months paper.

The bill is considered the wisest step ever made toward currency reform and it is hoped to and expected to meet all the requirements of all exigencies and occasions, to prevent the centralization of the wealth of the country in Wall street and in the hands of the money kings of the country, to avert and prevent the possibility of panics, to materially aid business, in that it will provide loans upon more reasonable collateral for manufacturers, thus enabling them to keep their factories going, even in the dull seasons, thereby directly aiding the laboring man by providing uninterrupted employment for him, and obviating the necessity of annual lay offs, which many were enforced to endure.

The measure is the result of the deliberations of the wisest men in Congress and was concurred in and voted for by many Republicans, Progressives and others who have the welfare of the country at heart, regardless of their political affiliations. Men skilled in the financial world, conversant with the country, unhesitatingly pronounce the measure a wise one and some of the most prominent of these come out unhesitatingly and predict that an era of prosperity shall follow its passage.

Some plain tight wads are now calling themselves Spugs.

Prize Winners.

In the Nina School taught by Miss Emma Sowers, the prizes offered for highest average in recitations and deportment were awarded to Mary Jane and Julia Rogers, two little daughters of Mr. Simpson Rogers.

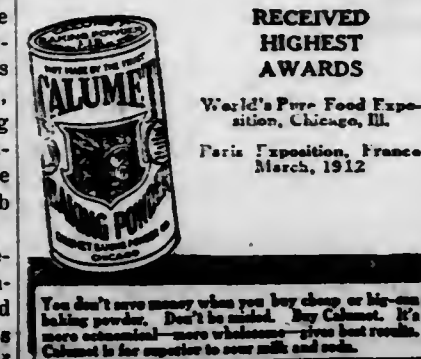

Mary Jane, the winner of the first prize, chose a gold locket and chain, while her sister, who came in with a close second, was awarded a bracelet. These little girls, aged eight and nine, respectively, are children any parents might well be proud of.

Prizes were also won by Stella Prewitt, Laverne Prewitt, Beatrice Casey, Mollie B. Moberley, for perfect attendance during the entire term of six months during which the school was taught.

Handling Hogs in Winter.

The successful hog growers use a little system in handling their fall and winter hogs the same as they do when handling other valuable stock. If the farmer wants his pigs to grow as fast as possible he will probably give them a mixture of 95 per cent corn chop and 5 per cent tankage the first thing in the morning. He will then slop the herd along about 9 or 10 o'clock. He will give the herd just enough feed at both of these times so they will clean it up and be slightly anxious for more. Alfalfa hay will be in evidence at all times. The hogs will be sloped again about 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon and given chop and tankage again the last thing in the evening. This is one method of feeding. There are others.

Remedy For Horse Itch.

Horses seem sometimes to be affected with a serious itching of the skin at the roots of the mane and likewise the roots of the hair about the tail which cannot be attributed to lice. The remedy which is suggested for an infection of this kind is to thoroughly wash the part affected with soap and water and after drying apply an iodine ointment, rubbing it in carefully. The iodine ointment may be made by taking one-half dram of iodine of potash and one ounce of lard. Lard is food and a four ounce dose of salts until the bowels are moving well will be a benefit to the horses in this condition. Intestinal worms, and especially pin worms, occasionally cause more or less rubbing of the tail.

Watering the Horse.

Always water the horse after he has eaten his hay at night. Do not go to bed leaving him thirsty all night.
